Delicacy is all about details. Craft and culture blends seamlessly in Indian art, as they are made to create something and someone can feel it all around. When color blends the human soul, it is not just a color, it is a feeling. However, before choosing the thread for the color, they think whether it will be the fabric and the thread used in complementing each other or not. The traditional Indian fabrics are made to create colors. Pampas in dark blue, the green, brown, red, pink, etc. are the main colors. The dark green, black, red, brown, purple, orange and blue.

Indian culture is all about diversity. Gold and silver threads are highly treasured in India, as they are made of pure minerals and minerals can give metal its strength. When colors blend the mixture and mix, you get amazing mix. However, before choosing the thread for the embroidery, they check whether the color is the largest and the largest used in complementing each other's color. The color palette used in Indian art is usually in diverse colors; pumpkin is in darker blue, the green, brown, pink, sky blue are the most common colors. The dark green, black red, maroon, purple, orange and more.

Embroidery is all about threads. Gold and silver threads are highly treasured in India, as they are used to create beautiful and intricate patterns on fabric. When you think of embroidery, you think of the traditional art of stitching. However, today, embroidery is used in many different ways. It is used to create beautiful patterns on fabric, but it is also used to create beautiful patterns on other materials like leather, paper, and even wood. The traditional art of embroidery is still very much alive and well, and it is being used in many different ways.
